

Reporting and Responding to the New York State Justice Center

Do Not Let Investigations Interfere With Your Mission

Does your organization understand the process for reporting to and responding to The New York State Justice Center for the Protection of People with Special Needs?

Iseman Cunningham Riester & Hyde LLP Attorneys and Counselors at Law

Iseman, Cunningham, Riester & Hyde maintains a sophisticated health care legal practice.

We represent providers caring for vulnerable populations and want to support you in your important, mission-driven work.

Let us help your organization with case matters, consultations and employee education.

Contact John Queenan at 518-462-3000 for more information.

9 Thurlow Terrace, Albany, NY 12203
Ph: 518-462-3000

Offices also in Poughkeepsie and Millbrook.

YOU NEED TO KNOW:

- Your obligations
- Required training and best practices
- Reporting responsibilities/consequences of agency action
- How the agency differs from other state regulatory agencies
- Best practices for internal investigations
- Who has access to investigation records
- How investigations impact employees, operations and professional licensure
- How to use your independent review committee effectively
- Confidentiality requirements
- When you are required to complete a corrective action plan (CAP) or implement corrective action
- Interacting with the Justice Center
- The appeals process

www.icrh.com

Be prepared. Prevent events. Know the risks regarding reporting, responding to and proceeding with internal investigations.